My most vivid memory from childhood

One of these memories occurred when I was about 5-6 years old. My dad was constantly at work, and I can't say that we spent a lot of time together, up to a certain point. But he regularly read to me at night, every day. One of these evenings, he came home with new tapes for the tape recorder. At first, we watched clips of foreign artists, I don't remember exactly, but they were guys in the style of Modern Talking, or O-zone. At that time, my dad listened to a lot of music in this direction... and, so, after watching the clips, he suggested that I lie down on the floor, close my eyes and listen. Back then, we had a huge, soft carpet on the living room floor, and the ceiling was paneled with butterflies stuck on every joint. I lay down, and he put on a tape of A-ha music, lay down next to me, and throughout the album we lay on the floor, listening to music and looking at butterflies
