Your achievements.

Write down the main achievements in your life (minimum 50 words)* For example: at school, university, at work, sports achievements, etc.

I tend to devalue my achievements, so it's hard to say. The only thing that comes to my mind is a situation from childhood. By a lucky coincidence, I saved my father's life, that's what my parents told me. I am grateful to the current circumstances, I love my father very much.

The event or moment I regret about the most

I didn't have time to talk to my childhood friend before she left.

Why I decided to become a donor?

I thought for a long time what kind of mother I would be, can I provide a good childhood for my child, do I really want to be a mother? I realized that I have the opportunity to conceive a child at any moment, so I allow myself doubts and thoughts, but some people don't have this opportunity, and these are the people who know exactly what they want, that's why they are here. I believe that such people definitely deserve to have this opportunity and become parents!

My most vivid memory from childhood

I can't say that the memories were cheerful, but they were definitely warm. Once, when I was a child, I ran away to a friend's place during lunch and didn't tell anyone. I came back, and, of course, they lost me. The most frightened at that moment was my dad; he looked for me all over the village; when he saw me, he ran to me. He was in tears, silently hugged me tightly and said nothing. At the age of 5, I realized how much my dad loves me.
