The most hilarious moment in life

One day, I accidentally won two tickets to an electronic music festival in Nizhny Novgorod. I packed up and left in a day with a friend who had also spontaneously packed. Until the very end, I didn't believe I'd get there, but it was as if nothing depended on me, and the whole world was contributing to my happiness in those days.

The event or moment I feel most proud of

I'm filled with pride every time I succeed in accomplishing something I set out to do. There have been countless such situations, each more exciting than the last. Most recently, I'm proud of having worked through old grievances against my parents with a psychologist, gotten out of a difficult codependent relationship, and brought my health to the level of a super soldier.

Death of a close relative

Why I decided to become a donor?

I have excellent genetics and while I don't plan to have children myself, I can help someone have a child.

My most vivid memory from childhood

I'm 8, my brother is 6, it's summer, we didn't tell anyone and went to the beach for a swim. We left all our extra belongings and his bike in the only bushes on the beach and went into the water. When we returned, we found only our clothes, and the keys and bike were gone. Instead of telling our parents, we went to the police. They thought we were being clever, but I preferred to take it as a compliment.
